An Inside Look ...

Welcome to Memphis State University

The bustling east Memphis campus of Memphis State University offers many activities and interests, just about something for everyone.

Young graduates of high schools across the nation coming to Memphis State find courses planned to prepare them for the variety of jobs they will take as men and women when they leave the campus as university graduates.

All activities at Memphis State are not, naturally, confined to the classroom. And friendships made here often last a lifetime. There are 11 sororities and nine fraternities that offer a continuing program of projects, parties and events in addition to the activities of religious groups, independent organizations, political clubs and clubs composed of people who have common interest in their studies.

More than 1,500 young men and women live in dormitories at Memphis State, forming a sizeable community within the City of Memphis. A main cafeteria serves wholesome meals at reasonable prices and a student center is open daily and evenings for snacks, studying, or just relaxing.

Memphis State University is contained within the limits of a compact campus that once was part of a rural plantation, but which is now located well within the city limits. Speedy municipal bus service puts the stores, shows and attractions of downtown Memphis within half an hour of the Memphis State campus. The City of Memphis has won numerous awards as the nation's quietest and cleanest city.

Admission Procedure

1. Complete the official Application for Admission form provided by the Dean of Admission. This should be done as early as possible during your senior year in high school, preferably in November or December. Mail it to the Dean of Admission at Memphis State University, Memphis 11, Tenn.
2. Take an entrance examination as soon as possible during your senior year. Ask your counselor or principal about arrangements for taking The American College Testing Program or The Scholastic Aptitude Test. If an application is on file when the examination score is received, a letter will be mailed to the applicant concerning the acceptability of the score.
3. Submit a transcript of your high school work as soon as possible after you graduate. Transcripts are accepted only when mailed directly from the high school to the Admissions Office at Memphis State.
4. When final acceptance is granted, a health card will be mailed. It must be completed and on file prior to registration.

EXPENSES

The following figures are accurately estimated for an academic year (nine months):

Registration fee	$ 165.00
Dormitory rent	$ 180.00
Textbooks and supplies (estimated)	$ 60.00
Board (estimate)	$ 500.00
Miscellaneous (estimate)	$ 150.00
TOTAL	$1,005.00

The total does not include laboratory breakage cards, private voice and music lessons, clothing or recreational expenses.

Freshmen boys taking AFROTC pay a $15 deposit on uniforms and books, and pay a dormitory deposit. Both deposits are refundable.

The School Of Arts And Sciences

In the School of Arts and Sciences at Memphis State University, majors are offered in 21 areas of the humanities, the natural sciences, and the social sciences, leading to one of six bachelor's degrees. This school offers to students a thorough training in a strong liberal arts curriculum.

Two of the degrees are academic (Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science); five are professional (Bachelor of Science in Chemistry, Bachelor of Fine Arts, Bachelor of Music, Bachelor of Science in Medical Technology, and Bachelor of Arts in Applied Science).

The 21 areas in which majors are offered are as follows: anthropology, art, biology, chemistry, economics, English, French, geography, German, history, journalism, Latin, mathematics, music, philosophy, physics, political science, psychology, sociology, Spanish, speech and drama (including general speech, theatre, oral interpretation, audiology and pathology, and radio and television).

The School of Arts and Sciences also offers several pre-professional programs of study. These programs prepare students for higher studies in the professions of medicine, dentistry, nursing, law, engineering, teaching (especially on the high school levels), and in various other professions related to these. Specialized advisory committees, representing all departments in which pre-professional students may major, are maintained by the University.

Since business is the backbone of the American way of life, the School of Business Administration at Memphis State is an important link.

Whether you would like to become an officer or efficient secretary in a small company or have your eyes set on big business, you will find the background you need in this school.

The School of Business Administration building has modern classrooms, machines and equipment.

The chances are good that your study field is within MSU's department of accountancy, the department of economics and finance, the department of management, the department of marketing or the department of secretarial science and office management.

After some basic courses, you will be prepared for fields of specialization that include public accounting, banking, investments, business research, insurance, real estate, sales management, office management or some one of the 22 study areas.

Graduates of this school are now located in every section of the United States and abroad.

Even after graduation, the School of Business is available to help the student. The school works in close cooperation with the alumni Placement Service, an office that finds jobs for students as its helps local and national firms fill vacancies in their staffs.

A graduate of this school receives the Bachelor of Business Administration degree. Graduate work is available in four areas.

The School of Business Administration

The School Of Education

Few people go through elementary and high school without at one time or another thinking "if I were a teacher . . ."

For those who decide on teaching as a career, the School of Education at Memphis State University offers one of the best training centers in the South.

The School has departments of Home Economics, Curriculum and Instruction, Health and Physical Education, Music Education and Educational Administration and Supervision. The Campus Laboratory School for public school pupils is under direction of the School of Education and is used for teacher training.

Students interested in qualifying for school positions such as principals, supervisors, superintendents, elementary teachers or high school teachers can find study programs in their special interest fields in the School of Education.

The Teacher Education Program at Memphis State is accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education as well as by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and is a member of the American Association of Colleges for teacher education.

The development and training of teachers at Memphis State, the purpose for which the school was founded, has become traditional in the years since MSU first opened its doors in 1912.

Graduates of this school are employed across the country.

Graduates of the School of Education receive a Bachelor of Science in Education degree.

The School Of Law

In today's complex world, the need for more and better attorneys, legal counselors, and advisors has become increasingly evident.

To help meet this need the School of Law was established at Memphis State in 1962. It is an advanced school. To be admitted, the student must have received a bachelor's degree.

If you have a law career in mind, the Memphis State School of Law is ideally located. In Memphis, the business capital of the Mid-South, are located courts of just about every type, all available for 'field trips' of law students.

In downtown Memphis, a short bus ride from the campus, are Federal Courts, Criminal Courts, City Courts, General Session Courts, Chancery Courts and others.

Some of the subjects law students take include pleading evidence, legal materials, creditor's rights, sales, and Federal income taxation.

After completing the course of study in the School of Law, the student is awarded the Bachelor of Laws degree.

You learn by doing in the Industrial Division of Memphis State University.

Work with industry appeals to many men (and more and more women) as our daily living becomes more technological. Study in the Industrial Division prepares students for jobs in industrial safety, industrial sales, as draftsmen and as industrial arts instructors, in addition to a great many other industrial vocations.

Basically, study in the Industrial Division involves planning and designing, building and constructing, testing and evaluating.

In these areas, you may study Industrial Arts Education (teaching or counseling); Drafting & Design Technology (architectural, mechanical, topographic, mechanical or nomography); Industrial Technology (production control or production methods); Construction Technology or Wood Technology.

A total of 42 courses are offered in the Industrial Division. In studying Construction Technology, for instance, you take courses in computing, design, estimating, materials, processes and surveying. In Counseling you may study guidance, scouting and therapy.

Graduates of the study programs of this division are awarded the Bachelor of Science degree.

The Industrial Division

The Graduate School

Perhaps you are already looking beyond a four-year university education. A few years ago, it was accepted that everyone needed at least a high school education to 'get by' in the adult world and a college degree put you a step ahead of the class.

But now the educational level has stepped up. The Graduate School at Memphis State is proving ever more popular as young men and women see the need for education beyond the bachelor's degrees.

Here are some of the positions the Graduate School prepares students to fill: school principal, superintendent or supervisor; a college-level teaching position; a biologist; a chemist; a specialist in finance or economics; Linguist; Engineering; Accountant or Auditor.

The 16 major study areas of the Graduate School are: accounting; biology; chemistry; curriculum and instruction; educational administration and supervision; Engineering and Applied Science; English; geography; health and physical education; history; management; Modern Languages (German, French, Spanish); music; finance and economics; science for teachers; and psychology. There are also 27 minor areas of study.

When an approved study course in the Graduate School is completed, the student is awarded the Master of Arts; Master of Science; Master of Business Administration; Master of Science in Teaching; Master of Arts in Teaching or Master of Education.

Air Force ROTC

Soaring jets and travel to the far corners of the world are irresistible attractions that bring many young men into the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps Program at Memphis State.

All male students at Memphis State who are physically able (excluding most veterans) are required to take two years of AFROTC. Students are chosen for advanced training after they have completed the basic course.

The Department of Air Science has over 2300 men enrolled. Since the AFROTC program began at Memphis State, hundreds of men have been commissioned as Air Force Officers; they serve in a variety of capacities from South Viet Nam to Africa. Few careers provide such excitement, varied experience, pride and deep gratification of service to country as does membership in the United States Air Force. It is a challenging career. Young college men should consider the opportunities inherent in Air Force ROTC.

The smart uniforms of Air Force blue are worn with pride at Memphis State and during trips sponsored by the AFROTC unit. Several flights a year carry students on field trips throughout the nation. Students in their senior year are given flight instruction.

To obtain a commission in the Air Force Reserve, the student must complete the four-year training course, take part in a summer training period, receive his bachelors degree from Memphis State and be physically qualified for acceptance into Air Force service.

Loans & Scholarships

MEMPHIS STATE UNIVERSITY SCHOLARSHIPS

These scholarships are reserved for graduates of Tennessee high schools and pay registration fees of $165 per academic year. These scholarships are good for four years, so long as minimum grade averages are maintained. The University awards these scholarships in cooperation with Tennessee high schools. Further information can be obtained by contacting your high school guidance counselor or principal or the Student Aid Office at Memphis State University.

MISCELLANEOUS SCHOLARSHIPS

A number of scholarships are provided by various groups or individuals. Application for any of these may be made by contacting the Student Aid Office at Memphis State University.

BAND SCHOLARSHIPS

These scholarships pay $50 to $120 and are awarded by the director of bands. Inquiries should be sent to the Director of Bands.

SPORTS SCHOLARSHIPS

Partial and full scholarships are awarded in football, basketball, baseball, track and golf. Inquiries should be sent to the coaches.

NATIONAL DEFENSE STUDENT LOANS

Applicants must rank in the upper fourth of their high school graduating class and must show a need for assistance. Inquiries should be addressed to the Loan and Scholarship Committee.

WORK OPPORTUNITIES

There are numerous work opportunities available through the Job Placement Office at Memphis State University. Employment is arranged after registration is complete so that working hours will not conflict with class hours.

ACCREDITATION

Memphis State University is fully accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and is a member of the Association of American Colleges, the Tennessee College Association, the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education, and the American Council on Education. The School of Education is accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

ORGANIZATION

In addition to the five schools and the industrial division, the teaching program of Memphis State University is supplemented by the Downtown Campus, the Evening Division, the Summer Session and the Extension Division. For further information on these programs, write to the Dean of Admissions.

PRE-PROFESSIONAL STUDY

Pre-professional training is offered in a number of areas at Memphis State University. Pre-professional advisory committees have been established to assist the student in planning pre-professional programs of study. These study programs include:

Pre-Medicine: medicine, dentistry, nursing, pharmacy, optometry, veterinary medicine, and medical technology.

Pre-Law: Under this course, students may prepare to enter Memphis State University's School of Law or any other accredited law school.

Pre-Social Work: This course prepares students to enter graduate schools of social work or to begin social work positions in agencies that require only a bachelor's degree for employment.

Sports At Memphis State University

Nationally prominent sports teams represent Memphis State University.

The MSU football Tigers play teams in the Top Ten of national rankings regularly and the Memphis State team has been ranked higher each year as it improves. Under direction of Coach Billy "Spook" Murphy, the Tigers have become recognized as a national power.

Basketball fans across the nation follow games of the MSU basketball Tigers. The team was runnerup in one National Invitation Tournament in New York and has won or been runnerup in several other tournaments since that time. The team plays one of the most difficult major schedules in the nation.

A new football stadium seats 50,000 and a new coliseum seats 13,000 basketball fans. The ultra-modern sports arenas are located at the Fairgrounds, near the MSU campus.

Varsity teams also ably represent Memphis State in track, baseball, golf, tennis and other sports.

For students who like to play non-varsity sports, an intramural sports program provides competition throughout the year. Tournaments are held in seasonal sports for fraternities, clubs and sororities. Softball, basketball, volleyball, handball and track are offered, along with individual sports, such as tennis, shuffleboard, badminton, table tennis and archery.

The student activity fees paid by Memphis State students entitle them to participate or be spectators in all university sports.

A General Description

Memphis State University has two primary goals. They are (1) to provide education beyond the high school for every person in the area with the capacity to profit from it regardless of means, and (2) to contribute to the betterment of our community by making its facilities and the special talents of its faculty available whenever and wherever needed.

Memphis State University has a variety of loans and scholarships from several different sources.

The state's first educational television station, WKNO-TV, is located on the Memphis State campus.

Memphis State has its own Indian tribe. More than a dozen Choctaw Indians live at Chucalissa Indian Village in south Shelby County. The ancient site and surrounding acres were given to Memphis State for anthropology study by the state division of parks.

One of Memphis' finest cultural activities, the Goodwyn Institute Lecture series, is held at Memphis State throughout the school year.

Specific information may be obtained by writing Dean of Admissions; Dean of Men (men's housing); Dean of Women (women's housing); or the Student Aid Director.

Dr. C. C. Humphreys, president of Memphis State University, invites to the campus any high school student interested in selecting a location for college education.

We think you will find what you want at Memphis State University.
